

Quick Space has quietly been a part of almost every major project in northern Nevada in the past few years. While the company has been known for onsite storage, it was the expansion into the site services business that has allowed such positive growth as a resource to support construction, distribution and event business in our region. Quick Space has supported the growth of the Sierra Region economic ecosystem by working with incoming companies and businesses to fulfill their needs, as they are building or expanding. We have worked to develop custom products to fit the specific needs of the customer, as well as modified our services to support the rapidly changing economy.

Our company saw the opportunity to provide site services and storage solutions in a rapidly growing area. The company identified that while the products themselves were needed, the service and manner in which we were able to provide the product is what sets us apart. Our team has taken the opportunity to create a business and culture that concentrates on attentive and superior customer service.

We have encountered a period of expansion and achievement after going through a transition of staff, leadership and reevaluating the values in which we define ourselves. We concentrate heavily on staff and leadership training, to ensure our practices are growing and evolving along with our business. Quick Space has identified that growth and change is directly correlated to the company leadership. We have focused on establishing a team that embraces our core values, using them as strict guidelines for hiring, firing and overall company conduct. Our leadership seeks to inspire by leading by example and incorporating the needs and feedback of the employees into the vision and culture of the company.

“We are pleased to be recognized for our innovation and commitment to provide solutions to our growing community, partnered with exemplary customer service,” said Ty Rogers, Director of Sales and Marketing. “We are proud of our role in the economic growth in our area and look forward to continuing to support and be a resource for Northern Nevada and the Sierra Region.” ■

The Kit Carson Entrepreneur of the Year Award applauds the visionary individual or company who trail blazed a new or unique path to meet market and customer needs. There is an ability to be innovative and creative when addressing evolving requirements or emerging markets. This entrepreneur inspires others with their vision, achievements, and leadership.
